Journey for the Sun

When: Fridays–Sundays. Continues through March 25 2018

Price: $25

Subtitled a “sci-fi cartoon circus.” this trippy little charmer, written by Seth Bockley, codirected by Frank Maugeri and Lindsey Noel Whiting, and featuring the acrobatic work of the Actors Gymnasium’s teen ensemble and others, packs a lot into less than 90 minutes: acrobatics, juggling, puppetry, and lots and lots of mildly campy clowning. The story, which aims to please young children, adolescents, and adults, is decidedly silly—a group of adventurers must travel to the sun to “cool it off” because it’s gotten too darned hot—but easily wins us over with its cool grace and constant inventiveness. Kasey Foster earns big laughs as the show’s sad-sack hero, Darryl, but the real scene-stealer is a likable young Chaplinesque clown named Jean Carlo Claudio. —Jack Helbig
